

Man exhibition stand to raise awareness for r(20)

Could you help us raise awareness of r(20) amongst health professionals and other parties with an interest in our ultra-rare disease?

The most effective way to reach out to paediatricians, neurologists, nurses, geneticists, researchers, academics and patients and families with epilepsy (amongst others) is to host an exhibition stand at a conference or event. Health professionals are obliged to attend a number of such events as part of the Continuous Professional Development (CPD, or ongoing training).

These types of event occur throughout the year, around the country and across the world. As Trustees, we have limited time and capacity to attend every event that we would like to have a presence at....and that is where our volunteers come in. As you know Dale and Dawn both have attended events for us in Birmingham, Cardiff and London. It is easier for volunteers to attend events closer to home to them and saves valuable travel costs.

The next event on the calendar is BPNA Annual Conference 3-5th Jan '18 at Kings College, London. Could you volunteer to host a stand for us there (it can be shared)?

If you are interested in helping at BPNA or any other future event, please contact Allison:

Reasonable expenses can be paid and exhibition items can be couriered to/.from the event.
